

ABSTRACT

Methods, systems and circuits for analyzing the performance of a vehicle having an electrical system are provided which determine a shift point while the vehicle is being driven. The shift point is determined using acceleration data and RPM data generated from the electrical system.